About the Institute

NTR College of Veterinary Science, Gannavaram of Sri Venkateswara Veterinary University, Tirupati, Andhra Pradesh came into existence during 1997-98 and was the first college in the region of Coastal Andhra Pradesh catering to the needs of livestock farmers. It is located on the Chennai-Kolkata National Highway (NH5) opposite to the Vijayawada International Airport and is about 22Km away from the Vijayawada City. The college has three main campuses Viz., main campus with 10 departments and NCC unit, livestock complex with three departments, livestock farms and fodder production units, Veterinary Clinical Complex accommodating clinical departments. The college is offering PG& PhD programmes along with the five and half year B.V.Sc. & A.H. Programme. The climate during proposed training duration is expected to be comfortable with temperatures between 24° C - 28°C.

Aim of training Course

Livestock extension is a diverse, valuable and a relatively new operational concept in India, and its role in veterinary and animal science research and development is not clearly understood by many. A livestock extension professional must possess both process and technical skills i.e. core competencies to be more effective in addressing livestock farmers' needs. The training aims at acquainting the livestock extension professionals with the core competencies to provide effective livestock extension advisory services (EAS) delivery required to deal with the changing livestock production systems, practices and the increasing awareness and ever changing farmers' needs too.

Course Contents:

Core topics of the training programme are:

1. Specific livestock extension Competencies
2. Specific Subject Matter Competencies
3. Technical Subject Matter application Competencies
4. Communication Competencies
5. Education and Technology Competencies
